

By the window, Goldilocks saw three chairs. She climbed onto the large chair, it was too hard. Then she sat in the medium chair, it was too soft. Finally, she sat in the small chair, it was just right! She started rocking. But it broke! Goldilocks was upset. In the next room, she saw three beds. First, she lay in the big bed, it was uncomfortable. Then she moved to the medium bed, but the blanket was too big. Finally, she lay down in the small, comfy bed and fell fast asleep.

Goldilocks realized she was very hungry. She sat on the biggest chair and tried the porridge from the largest bowl, but it was too hot! Then she moved to the medium chair and tasted the porridge from the medium bowl, but it was too cold. Finally, she sat on the smallest chair and ate from the tiniest bowl. That porridge was just right, and so tasty!

She knocked on the door. The door opened, and she stepped inside the cottage. But what she didn't know was that three bears lived there – a huge, shaggy Daddy Bear, a gentle Mommy Bear, and their son, Little Bear. At that moment, they were not at home.

Once upon a time in a village, there lived a girl named Goldilocks. She was a good girl, but unfortunately, not very obedient. One day, Goldilocks' parents went to the city to the market. They told her to stay home and not go anywhere. But she didn't listen – and off she went into the forest. She wandered and wandered... until she got lost. Suddenly, she saw a little cottage.

When the three bears returned home, they immediately noticed someone had been there. Daddy Bear roared, "Who ate the porridge from my bowl?" Mommy Bear roared too, "Who ate the porridge from my bowl?" Little Bear cried, "Who ate all my porridge?" Daddy Bear roared, "Who sat in my chair?" Mommy Bear roared, "Who sat in my chair?" Little Bear saw the broken chair and cried, "Who sat in my chair and broke it?" Daddy Bear roared, "Who lay in my bed?" Mommy Bear roared, "Who lay in my bed?" But Little Bear didn't say anything, because he saw Goldilocks sleeping in his bed.

Goldilocks woke up, saw the three bears, and was very frightened. Then Little Bear said to her, "Don't be afraid, little girl. We bears are kind and don't hurt people. But tell us, why did you eat my porridge, break my chair, and now sleep in my bed without permission?" Goldilocks felt very ashamed for the mess she had caused in the bears' house. She apologized to the bears for eating the porridge, breaking the chair, and making the bed messy. Then she ran as fast as she could to her parents. From that day on, Goldilocks listened to her parents and never did anything without their permission.
